

Dr Nicole Brown

Social Research & Practice and Education Ltd.

Dear Nicole,

The Practice As Research network has seen in 2022 with some exciting developments, which I am happy to share with you here.

I have been involved in a podcast led by Dr Gemma Harman, a Senior Lecturer in Dance and Dance Science at the University of Chichester. The episode I was involved in was to discuss Embodied Inquiry, but you may also be interested in the entire ResDance podcast series.

Bristol University Press is holding a webinar on developing research projects on the 24th January. As many of the contributors and panellists are somehow related to or involved in Practice As Research, you may find the webinar of interest, also. For anyone interested in poetry as research, you may want to check out The Resonate Festival which includes a performance of shared spoken word and poetry, and the call for contributions to the International Digital Storytelling Conference at Loughborough University, UK.

The Practice As Research "In conversation" series is coming together well, and here are the links to the two published episodes. In conversation 1 was held with Dr Jasmine Shadrack, composer, metal guitarist, scholar and author of the book "Black Metal, Trauma, Subjectivity and Sound: Screaming the Abyss". In conversation 2 was with Dr Sara Young, lecturer and researcher at UCL Institute of Education.

If you would like to get involved with this interview series, please, do get in touch.

Seminar series:

Our seminar series just keeps going stronger. If you missed our session in early January, where Dr Sara Young presented from her research work, just catch up via the Positionality in PAR research post on the website.

Our next seminar will be on the 2nd of February at 2 pm UK time with Dr Jenny Van der Aa talking about Jan Blommaert's powerful voice. To attend the seminar and subsequent discussion please, use the following Zoom link:

Join seminar on 2 Feb at
