Social Research & Practice and Education Ltd.

Dear Nicole,

As always, time flies way too quickly, and so it is already the end of June of our academic year 2021/2022. And whilst I do not seem to have much to show for this time, there are quite a few ideas that have been developing.

The Poetry As Research collective consisting of nine poetic inquirers from the Poetry As Research group have submitted their chapter to the editors for the book Voices and Silences: Poetry as Knowing and Learning in Social Research. Members of our PAR network and I have also started the planning our bid relating to Practice As Research, under the working title of "Practice As Research across disciplines: understanding, principles and implications". Áine McAllister is currently in the process of developing a schedule and details for the Poetry As Research group for the academic year 2022/2023, and of course, I have continued to map out the details for our seminar series.

For more details on how you can get involved with the Practice As Research network, do not hesitate to email Nicole Brown, and email Áine McAllister for more information and details about the Poetry As Research group.

Next seminar:

On 6 July 2022 at 2pm British Summer Time Matthew Butcher, an academic and designer at University College London, UK, will be presenting Architecture of slowness: reflecting on the actions of historical repetitions and loops.

Join seminar on 6 July at 2pm
